by Edgar Allan Poe (1845) Nil Sapientiae Odiosus Acuumine Nimio. - Seneca. In Paris, just after the Dark One Gusty evening in the autumn of 18 --, he was enjoying the dual luxury of meditation and a Meerschm, in company with my friend C. Auguste Dupin, in his small rear library, or Book wardrobe. Au Troisième, No. 33, Rue Dunot, Faubourg St. Germain. For an hour at least we had maintained a profound silence; While each, to my informal observer, it could have seemed intensely occupied and exclusively busy with the smoke-curl'd eddies that oppress the atmosphere of the room. For myself, however, mentally discussing some arguments that had formed the matter for conversation between us in a previous period of the evening; I mean the report of the Rue Morgue, and the mystery that attends the murder of Marie Rogêt. I looked at it, so as something of a coincidence, when the door of our apartment was launched open and admitted our old knowledge, Monsieur G., - the Prefect of the Parisian police. We gave him abundant welcome; Because there was almost the half of the fun by the man, and he hadn't seen him for several years. We were sitting in the dark, and Dupin now rose to illuminate a lamp, but he sat again, without doing so, on G. is saying he had called to consult us, or rather to ask for the opinion of my friend, on some Official business dealing with great quantity of problems. "If it is a point that requires reflection," the Dupin has observed, as he proves to paste the wick. "we will examine him to a better purpose in the dark." "This is another one of your strange notions," said the Prefect, which has a fashion of calling everything "strange" which was at the understanding of him, and so he lived in the midst of an absolute legion of "oddities". "Very true," Dupin said, as he provided his visitor with a pipe, and rolled a comfortable chair towards him. "And what is the difficulty now?" I asked. "Nothing more in the way of murder. I hope?" "Oh no, nothing of that nature, the fact is that the business is really really simple, and I don't doubt that we can manage it sufficiently well; but then I thought Dupin would like to hear the details, because it's so excessively strange. -- Simple and odd," said Dupin. "Because, yes; and not exactly this, not even the fact, we were all a good deal perplexed because the relationship is so simple, and yet we brow up completely. -- "Maybe it's the simplicity of the thing that makes you guilty," my friend said. "What absurdness you speak!" The prefect replied, laughing heartily. "Perhaps the mystery is a bit too clear," said Dupin. "Oh, good sky! Who has ever heard of such an idea?" "A little too obvious," "Ha! He! He! -Ha! He! He! -Ho! I HO! I HO!" -Rear'd our visitor, deeply amused. "Oh, Dupin, you will still be the death of me!" "And what, after all, is the question available?" I asked. "Because, I'll tell you," replied the prefect, as he gave a long, constant and contemplative breath, and settled in the chair. "He went to you in a nutshell, but, before starting, let me prece that this is a deal that asks the biggest secret, and that I should most likely lose the position he now holds, I knew I confided to someone. -- "Proceed," said I. "Or no," said Dupin. "Well, then; I received personal information from a very high quarter, which a certain document of the last importance was deputy by the real apartments. The individual who has brought it is known; This beyond a doubt; He was seen take it. It is known, also that it still remains in possession of him. -- "How are you known?" "Churches Dupin." It is clearly deduced, "replied the prefect", from the nature of the document, and from the nature of the document and the results of the results they would have They arise from his passage of the Thief. - It is to be said, and from his employing it as it must design at the end to use it. -- "Be ittle more more I said. "Well, I can venture to say that the document gives its support a certain power in a certain fourth in which this power is immensely precious". The prefect was passionate about the diplomacy rate. "I still don't understand," said Dupin. "No? Well, the disclosure of the document to a third person, which is not unnamed, questioned the honor of a character of the most exalted station; and this did the document holder an impairment over the character illustrated of which honor and peace are so repented. -- "But this ancestry", interposed, "would depend on the knowledge of the thief of the knowledge of the loser of the thief. Who would dare ... -- "Il Ladro", said G., A -- The Minister of --, who dares all things, those disconnected and those who become a man. Theft method was not less ingenious than bold. The document in question - letter, to be Frank -had was received by the robbed character while only in the Royal Boudoir. During his Perusia he was suddenly interrupted by the entrance of the other figure enhanced by which above all was his desire to hide it. After a hasty and vain efforts to push it into a drawer, she was forced to position her, open as she was on a table. The address, however, was higher, and the content therefore not exposed, the letter is escaped. To this crushout entered Minister D. - His eye of L'nyx immediately perceives the document, recognizes the calligraphy of the address, observes the confusion of the faced character, and establishes it the secret of her. After some commercial transactions, she hurried in her ordinary way, she produces a bit similar to the one in question, she opens it, pretends to read it, and then place it in closely juxtaposition to the other. She again she converses, for about fifteen minutes, on public affairs. In the end, in taking leave, she also takes the letter to which she hadn't complained from the table. His legitimate owner saw, but of course, he did not dare to call attention to the act, in the presence of the third character who was in his elbow. The Minister damped; Leaving your letter - An importance of any importance --upon the table. -- "Here, then," said Dupin to me," you exactly what you ask to make the ancient ancestry - the knowledge of the thief of the Loser the thief. -- "Yes, "replied the prefect;" And the power so achieved has, for a few months, it was handled, for political purposes, to a very dangerous extent. The robbed character is more accurately convinced, every day, the need to claim the letter of him. But this obviously cannot be done openly. Finally, driven to despair, he committed the question for me. -- "So who," Dupin said, in the midst of a perfect smoke vortex, "no more sagacio agent could, I suppose, being desired, or even imagined. -- "I like me," replied the Prefect;" But it is possible that some of these opinions may have been entertained. -- "It is clear," said I, "How to look, that the letter is still in possession of the minister; Since this possession is, and not any use of the letter, which gives power. With employment, power part. "True," said G. "And on this conviction I proceeded. My first cure was to do a complete search for the Minister hotel; And here my boss embarrassment lay in the need to look without the knowledge of him. At the other things, I was warned of the danger that he would have behaved to give him reason to suspect our design. -- "But, "I said, "you're quite au fait in these investigations. The Parisian police did this often before. -- "Oh yes; And for this reason I didn't desparate. The minister's habits also gave me a great advantage. He is frequently absent from home all night. The servants of him does not At all numerous. They sleep at a distance from the apartment of their master, and, being mainly Neapolitans, they are readily drunk. I have the keys, like you know, with which I can open any room or toilet in Paris. Paris. Three months a night has not passed, during most of the most of which I have not been engaged personally, in sacking the No --- hotel. My honor is interested, and, to mention a great secret, the reward is enormous. So I have not abandoned the search until I became fully satisfied that the thief is a more astute man of myself. I intend to have investigated every corner and corner of the premises where the card can be hidden. -- "But it is not possible," suggested, "that although the letter can be in possession of the minister, how is it unquestionably, could it hid him elsewhere that in him themselves I state him?" "This is as soon as possible," said Dupin. "The current particular condition of business in court, and above all of those intrigues in which it is known to be involved, would make the instantaneous availability of the susceptibility of the documents to be produced at a time notice - a point of almost equal importance with his possession. -- "His susceptibility to be produced?" "I said I. That says, to be destroyed," said Dupin. "True," observed. "The sheet is clearly then in the rooms. As for his being on the person of the Minister, we can consider that as out of demand. -- "Entirely," said the Prefect. "It was twice Waylaid, as if by footpads, and the person strictly sought under my inspection. "You may have saved this problem," Dupin said. "D. I assume, it's not completely crazy, and, otherwise, he must have anticipated these waylayings, of course. -- "It's not quite a fool," said G. "But then he is a poet, that I consider only one removing from a madman." "True," said Dupin, after a long and thoughtful, by the Meerschm of him, "even though I was official of certain Doggerel myself. -- "Suppose you have details," said I, "the details of your search. -- "Because the fact is that we took our time, and we looked in every where I had a long experience in this business I took the whole building, room for room ; Dedicating the nights of a whole week for each. We have examined, first, the furniture of each apartment. We have opened every drawer possible; and I assume you know it, to an adequately trained police officer, such a thing like a secret drawer is impossible. Any man is a dolge that it allows a "secret" drawer to escape it to a search of this type. The thing is so simple. There is a certain quantity of blueed - to be accounted for in each cabinet. So we have accurate rules. The fifty part of one Line couldn't escape. After the lockers we took the chairs. The pillows we have probed with the long needles we saw us to use. From the tables we removed the peaks. -- "Why so?" "Sometimes the upper part of a table or other furniture arranged in a similar way, is removed from the person who wants to hide an article; then the leg is excavated, the article deposited within the cavity and the upper part replaced. I Funds and peaks of the bedposts are used in the same way. -- "But couldn't the cavity be detected?" I asked. "In no way, if, when the item is deposited, a sufficient cotton bearing is placed around it around it. Furthermore, in our case, we were obliged to proceed without noise. -- "But you couldn't have removed - you couldn't take all the furniture items in which it would be possible to make a deposit in the way of which cities. A letter can be compressed in a thin spiral roll, not very different in shape or Bulk from a large mesh needle, and in this form it could be inserted in the step of a chair, for example. Didn't you take all the chairs for pieces?" -- "Certainly not; but we did better - we examined the pegs of each in the hotel, and, in fact, the junction of each description of the furniture, with the help of a more powerful microscope. There have been traces of recent disorders we should not have failed to detect it instantly. A single granule of powder powder, for example, would have been obvious as a one Any disorder in the connection - In the event of unusual cash in the joints - we should undergo to ensure detection. "I assume you looked at the mirrors, between the tables and plates, and you have gone the beds and bed dresses, as well as curtains and carpets. -- "That, of course; And when we absolutely completed every particle of furniture in this way, then we examined the house itself. We divided all its surface into compartments, which we were numbered, so that no one could be missing; Then we examined every single square thumb throughout the room, including the two houses immediately adjacent with a microscope. As before. -- "The two adjacent houses!" "Exclaimed;" You must have a great amount of problems. -- "We had; But the reward offer is prodigious. "Include the gardens of the houses?" "All the gardens are paved with bricks. They gave us relatively little problems. We examined the moss in the bricks and found it undisturbed. -- "Did you look among D documents - are they, of course, and in the books of the library?" "Certainly, we opened each package and package; not only have we opened each book, but we delivered every leaf in each volume, we are not satisfied with a simple shock, according to the fashion of some of our police officers. We also measured the Thickness of each cover of books, with the most accurate admission and applied to each the most jealous control of the microscope. Some of the bonds has been recently deceived, would have been absolutely impossible that the fact should have escaped observation. Some five or Six volumes, precisely from the hands of the wallet, we feel carefully, longitudinally, with needles. -- "Did you explore the floors under the carpets?" "Beyond the doubt, we have removed each carpet and examine the cards with the microscope. -- "And the card on the walls?" "Yes. "Have you looked at the cellars?" "We have done. -- "So, "I said, "You made an error mistake, and the letter is not in the clubs, as you suppose. "I'm afraid you're really there," the prefect said. "And now, Dupin, what would you recommend to do?" -- "To make a thorough redevelopment of the premises. -- "This is absolutely useless," answered G. - "I'm not sure that I breathe that the letter is not at the hotel. "I have no better advice to give you," Dupin said. "Do you obviously have an accurate description of the letter?" "Oh yes!" - The prefect here, produce a memorandum book, proceeded to read a minute of an internal account aloud and above all of the outer aspect of the missing document. Shortly after completing the arose of this description, he took his departure, more fully depressed in the spirits of how much I had ever met the good Lord. In about a month after he paid us another visit, and he found us very much almost as before. He took a pipe and a chair and entered an ordinary conversation. Eventually I said, "Well, but G., - what of the registered letter? I assume that you have finally decided to decide that there is no excessively overvaluing the minister?" "Confondato, let's say that. I did the ressement, however, as the Dupin suggested - but it was all lost, as I knew it would be. -- "How much a reward was offered, did you say?" Churches Dupin. "Because, a great deal - a very liberal reward does not like to say how precisely; but one thing will say, that I wouldn't mind giving my individual control for fifty thousand francs to anyone who could get that letter. The fact is that it is becoming more and more importance every day, and the reward has recently been doubled. If I was trephate, however, I could not do more than I did. -- "Because, yes," said Dupin, Drainingly, among the ceilings of the His Meerschm, "We really give it -think, G., - you have not exercised yourself - at most this matter, you could - some other. I think, eh? -- "Like? - How? -- "Because - Puff, Puff - you Mise - Puffuf, Puffre - Advice Advice in Quattra, eh? Eh? Puff, Puff. Do you remember the story they tell about Abernethy -- "No? Abernethy block!" -- "To tell the truth! Helping it and welcome. But once, a certain rich story conceived the spinning project on this abernethy for a medical opinion. Looking up, for this purpose, a normal conversation in a private company, he has insinuated the case of him to his doctor, like that of an imaginary individual. -- "We suppose," said the avar, "that the symptoms of him are so and so, now doctor, what would you have directed to take?" -- "Take! Abernethy said, "the reason why, to request a consultation, to be sure. -- "MA," said the prefect, a little baffle. "I am perfectly willing to take advice, and pay for it. I would really like to give fifty thousand francs to anyone who would help me. -- "In this case, Dupin replied, the opening of a drawer, and the production of a checkbook. "You can also fill a check for the amount mentioned. After signing, I will deliver you the letter. "I was stunned. The prefect looked absolutely Thunderstricken. For a few minutes he remained speechless and immobile, less, looking disbelievingly my friend with his mouth open and his eyes that seemed to start from the orbits. , So, apparently, to some extent, seized a pen, and after various peases and empty looks, finally filled and signed a fifty thousand francs check, and delivered through the Dupin table the latter examined carefully deposited in his pocket. Book, then, unlocking a writing desk, then took the letter and gave it to the prefect this official grasped in a perfect agony of joy, he opened it with a trembling hand, he glanced at its content. And int then, remasculating and Fighting the door, rushed to a long time without so many compliments from the room and from the house, without having pronounced a syllable from Dupin asked him to fill control. When he was wa. To, my friend entered or some explanations. "Parisian police," he said, "I am extremely able to their way. They are persevering, ingenious, cunning, and completely paid into the knowledge that their tasks seem mainly to the question. So, when G - detailed to Us His way of looking for the premises at the hotel D., - I heard all the confidence in her having made a satisfactory investigation - so as much as her extended labors ". "As for the extensive efforts of him?" Said I. "Yes," said Dupin. "The measures adopted were not only the best of their kind, but performed to absolute perfection. If it were the registered status letter within the range of their research, these individuals would have found it at the other hand. "I simply rice - but it seemed pretty serious in everything he said. "The measures, then," continued ", were good in their kind, and of excellent workmanship; Their defect was in their being inapplicable to the case, and for the man a certain set of highly ingenious resources are, with The prefect, a sort of Bed of Procuste, to whom he fits his drawings with strength but he is perpetually mistaken to be too deep or too low, for matter in hand. And many a schoolboy is a reasoner better than He knew about eight years of The age, whose marbles to guess in the 'par and odd' game has attracted universal admiration. This game is simple, and you play with marbles. A player holds in Hand a number of these toys, and the requests of another if that number is equal or odd if the hypothesis is right, the guess wins one . if wrong, loses one the boy to whom alludo won everyone The school's marbles certainly had some principle of guessing. --, and this lake in mere observes The cunning and admeasurement of his opponents. For example, a Simplet Arrant On is his opponent, and, raising his closed hand, "Are they equal or odd?" Our schoolboy, "strange" responses, and loses, but on the second test wins, and then tells himself, the simpleton also had them on the first test, and his quantity of cunning is just enough to make him have the odds on according to. I Guess strange; - Strange and won guess; Now, with a degree a degree over the first, would have reasoned so. "This type finds that in the first instance I guessed, and in the second, pronounce to himself at the first impulse, a simple variation from event to strange, as he has Made the first simpleton; but then a second thought suggest that this is too simple, and eventually decided to put it even as before. Then he also imagined "guessing and wins. Now this mode of reasoning in the schoolboy, that his companions defined "lucky", what, in the last analysis of him, is it? -- "It is simply, "I said, "an identification of the intellect of reasoning with that of his opponent. -- "Á, "said Dupin. And, after having investigated the boy with what it means that he carried out in-depth identification in which his success consisted, I received an answer as follows: "When I would find out how much wise, or how stupid it is, or how good it is good, or as beautiful one is, or what are his thoughts at the moment, I fashion the expression of my face, in the most accurate way possible, in accordance with the expression of his, and then wait to see what thoughts or feelings They arise in my mind or in the heart, as if to combine or correspond to the expression. Campanella. -- And the identification ", I said, "the intellect of the accountant with that of his opponent depends, if I understand the accuracy with which the opponent's intellect is admitted. -- "For the Its practical value depends on To this, "Dupin replied; And the prefect and the cohort of him fall so frequently, first, by default of this identification, and, secondly, for badly admitted, or rather through not admirations, of the intellect with which they are engaged. They only consider their own ideas of naive; And, in the search for something hidden, announcement only to the mode in which they would hide it. They are right in this so much --th their nauté is a faithful representative of that of the mass; But when the cunning of individual felon is different in their character, the felon fo lss, obviously. This always happens when it is above your own, and very usually when it is below. They do not have a variation of principle in their investigations; At best, when it is urged by some unusual emergency - some extraordinary reward - they extend or exaggerate their old ways of practice, without touching their principles. What, for example, in this case of D - has been done to vary the principle of action? What is all this boring, and probe, and playing and scrutinizing with microscope and dividing the surface of the registers square square - which is every thing except an emerging for the application of the only principle or series of Principles of research, which is based on the only series of notions regarding human ingenuity, to which the prefect, in the long routine of his duty, was it used to it? You don't see that it has taken it for granted that all men tread hide a letter, not exactly in a bored Gambletto hole on a leg chair - but at least, in a bit of hole or angle suggested by the same tenor of thought that would he urge a man to secrete a letter in a bored gampling hole on a leg chair? And do not see also that these corners for concealment are adapted only for ordinary occasions and would be adopted only by ordinary intellect. For, in all cases of concealment, a disposal of the hidden article - the provision of it in this waypoints, - largely presumable and alleged; And so his discovery depends, not only on the Aumen, but completely on care, patience and determination of applicants; And where the case is of importance - what is equivalent to the same thing in the police eyes, when the reward is of greatness, - quality qualities The question has never been known to fall. Now you will understand what I meant to suggest that, I had the established letter hidden everywhere within the limits of the prefect - in other words, they had the principle of its concealment between the principles of the discovery of the prefect were a question of all the demand. This official, however, has been carefully mixed; And the remote source of the defeat of him resides in the assumption that the minister is a madman, because he has acquired famous as a poet. All fools are poets: This is the prefect. And he's simply guilty of a media not distributed onwards by dedicating that all poets are crazy. -- "But he really is the poet?" "I asked. "There are two brothers, I know; And both have reached the reputation of letters. The minister who believes he wrote the differential calculation. He is a mathematician, and no poet. -- "You are wrong; I know him well; He's both. As a poet and mathematician, he could not reason at all, and therefore he would be at the Mercy of the Prefect. -- "I am surprised, "I said, "with these opinions, which have been contradicted by the voice of the world. Do not intend to set the well-digested idea of the contrary to anything. The mathematical reason has long been considered as the reason par excellence. "Il A A PARIER". Dupin replied, quoting from Chamfort. -- "Que Hoste Publique ideas, TOUTE CONVENTION Recue, EST UNE UNEAS, Auto Elle a Plus Grand Nombre". The mathematicians, I grant you, have done their best to promulgate the popular mistake to which it alludes, and that it is no less an error for its promulgation as a truth. With an art worth a better cause, for example, have insinuated The term 'analysis' in application to algebra. The French are the originators of this particular deception; but if a term is of any importance - if the words derive any value from the applicability - the "analysis" transmits 'algebra "As much as, in Latin, 'Ambitus "implies" ambition ", religion "religion" honest omisini, "a set of honorable men". "You have a litle at your fingertips, I see," said I, "with some of Paris's algebras; but proceed. "I discussed availability, and therefore the value, of this reason that is cultivated in any special form different from surroundingly logical. The controversial, in particular, the reason was educated by the mathematical study. Mathematics is the science of the form. And quantity: mathematical reasoning is only logical applied to form and quantity observation. The great mistake is in assuming that even the truths of what is called pure algebra, they are truth abstract or general. And this error is So Dear that I am confused at the universality with which it was received. Mathematical axioms are not axis of the general truth. What is true for the relationship - of form and quantities - is often coarsely false regarding morality , for example. In this last science is usually falsely false the aggregated parts are equal to the complex. In the chemistry also the axiom falls. In the consideration of the motif falls; for two reasons, each One of a given value, does not necessarily have a value when combined, equal to T sum of their separate values. There are numerous other mathematical truths that are only truth within the limits of the report. But mathematics claims, from his true truths, through the habit, as if they were an absolutely general applying - that the world really imagines it. Bryant, in his "mythology" very learned, "mentions a similar source of error, when he says that" even if the pagan fairytimes is not believed, yet we continually forget, and make inference from them as existing realities ". With algebart , however, that are pagans themselves, the "pagan Fables" are believed, and inferences are made, not so much through the Of memory, as through an additional irresponsible of the brain. In n I have never met but the mere mathematician who could be trusted to equal roots, or one who did not clandestinely hold it as a point of his faith that x squared + px was absolutely and unconditionally equal to q. Tell one of these gentlemen, by way of experiment, please, that you believe may occur where x squared + px is not altogether equal to q, and, having made him understand what you mean, get out of his how to quickly reach the most convenient, for, beyond doubt, he will seek to knock you down. I mean, "continúA" Dupin, while I merely laughed at the latest observations of him, "that if the Minister had been no more than a mathematician, the Prefect would have been no necessity of giving me this check. I knew him, though, as both mathematician and poet, and my measures were adapted to his capacity to him, with reference to the circumstances by which he was surrounded. I knew him as a courtier, too, and as an intriguing bold. Such a man, I considered, could not fall to be aware of the Policial ordinary mode of action. He could not have failed to anticipate --and events have shown that he does not anticipate manA" -The waylayings to which he was subjected. He must have foreseen, I reflected, the secret investigations of the premises him. His frequent absences from home during the night, which were hailed by the Prefect as certain aids to his success, I regarded only as ruses, to afford opportunity for thorough search to the police, and then the first to impress them with the conviction of which G., in fact, he has finally arrive --the conviction that the letter was not on the premises. I felt, too, that the whole line of thought, I was at some pains to detail to you right now, as far as the invariable principle policial action in searches for hidden items -I felt that all this line of thought would necessarily pass through the minister's mind. It would imperatively lead him to despise all the ordinary corners of concealment. He could not, I reflected, be so weak as not to see that the most intricate and remote recess of his hotel would be open to him as his common closets to the eyes, to the probes, to the gimlets, and microscopes of the Prefect. I saw, in the end, it would be driven, as a matter of course, the simplicity, if not deliberately induced to it as a matter of choice. You will remember, perhaps, how desperately the Prefect laughed when I suggested, upon our first interview, that it was just possible this mystery troubled him so much because of it being so very obvious. -- "Yes, I said, "I remember well his joy. I really thought he would fall into convulsions "The material world", continued Dupin, "abounds with very strict analogies to the immaterial; so some color of truth is given to the rhetorical dogma, that metaphor or simile, may be made to strengthen an argument and participates @ to embellish a description. The principle of the life inertia, for example, seems to be identical in physics and metaphysics. It is no longer true in the first, that a great body is more difficult sets motion of a smaller, and that its subsequent momentum is commensurate with this difficulty, which is, in the latter, that the intellects vast capacity, while more forced, more consistent and more eventful in their movements than those of lower rank, are even less easily moved, more embarrassed and full of hesitation in the early stages of their advancement. Also in this case?-. Have you ever noticed that the street signs, over the shop doors, are the most attractive of attention " I never gave the matter a thought, "I said, "There's a puzzle game ", filming, "which played on a map. Part of playing requires another to find a given word --the name Fiume, state or word empire - in short, on the variegated and puzzled graph of the graph. A novice in the game, aims to put your opponents into your opponents They are more meticulous names; But the skill selects words like stretch, in large characters, from one end of the graph to another. These, such as the signs and overlapping signs with letters of the road, escaping the DINT observation to be excessively obvious; And here physical supervision is precisely similar with the moral inappreciation with which the intellect suffers from passing such considerations too tight and too palpably obvious. But this is a point, somehow appears above or under the understanding of the prefect. He has never thought that he thought it probable, or possible, that the minister immediately deposited the letter under the nose of the whole world, as to prevent any part of that world to perceive it. -- "But more reflected on the daring, daring and discriminating engineer of D --, on the fact that the document must always be at hand, if it intended to use it in good purpose; and on the decisive evidence, obtained with the prefect, which it was not hidden within the limits of the ordinary search of the dignary research - the most satisfied have become that, to hide this letter, the minister had resorted to the complete consultant and Sagace not to try to hide it at all. "Full of these ideas, he prepared me. With a pair of green glasses and call me a nice morning, quite by chance, at the ministerial hotel. I found --, at home, yawning, relax and dawdling, as usual, and pretending to be in the last endui end. Á, perhaps, the most energetic human being now is alive - but it's just when no one sees it. "To be also with him, I complained about my weak eyes, and I complained about the need of the glasses, under the cover of which I housed with caution and carefully the apartment, while apparently intent on the conversation of my guest. "I paid particular attention to a large writing table near which he sat down, and on which he was confused, some various letters and other documents, with one or two musical instruments and some books. Here, however, after a long and very resolved scrutiny, I couldn't see anything to excite particular suspicion. "In length my eyes, to go to the room circuit, fell on a trumpety filigree rack of pasta, which hung to dangle by a dirty blue ribbon, from a small brass knob right under the half of the fireplace. In this rack , which had three or four magazines, there were five or six business cards and a solitary letter. The latter was very dirty and crumpled. It was quashed almost in two, through the middle if a design, at first instance, A completely useless tears, had been altered, or remained, in the second. He had a great black seal, bringing the D ... figure very conspicuously, and was addressed, in a decrease in the female hand, to --, The minister, himself. He was pushed incidentally, and even, as he seemed, with contempt, in one of the superior rack divisions. "As soon as I looked at this letter, of what was the one I was looking for. To be sure, it was, to all the appearances, radically different from what the prefect to read a description thus one minute. Here the seal was large and black, with the D-Cipher; Here he is small and red, with his arms duquel of the family s. Here, the address, the minister, was diminutive and feminine; There is superscriptions, to a certain real character, was markedly bold and decisive; The size alone formed a correspondence point. But therefore, the radicality of these differences, which was excessive; The dirt; The dirty and torn condition of the document, therefore inconsistent with the true methodical habits of D -, and therefore suggestive of a design to delude the observer in an idea of the image of the deactivation of the document. These things, together with the situation of this document, full, full, in view of each visitor, and therefore exactly in accordance with the conclusions to which I previously it arrived; These things, I say, were strongly corroborative of suspicion, in the one who came with the intention of suspecting. "I prolonged my visit as long as possible, and, while I kept a more animated discussion with the minister, on a topic that I knew well had never missed interest and excites him, I kept my attention really riveted on the letter. In this exam, I memory the external appearance and the arrangement in the rack. And even fallen, finally, on a discovery that together at rest any trivial doubt I was able to scrutinize the edges of the card. I observed them to be more irritated that it seemed necessary. They presented the appearance that manifests itself when a rigid paper, having been folded and pressed with a folder, is folded in the reverse direction, in the same folds or edges that had formed the original fold. This discovery it was enough. It was clear to me that the letter had been transformed, like a glove, out inside, re-direct, and re-sealed. I wish you a good morning minister, eh A took my departure at a time, leaving a gold tobacchira up on the table. "The next morning I called for the tobacchira, when we recovered, very enthusiasm, the conversation of the previous day. While busy, though, a strong relationship, as if a gun, was immediately heard under the hotel windows, and it happened to him a series of scary screams, and the chas value. I was hospitalized in a window, opened it, and looked out. Meanwhile, I stepped up to the rack card, took the letter, put it into Pocket, and replaced with a facsimile. (as far as external.) that I had carefully prepared in my accommodation, imitating the cipher d -, very easily, by means of a bread formed gasket ". The disturbance in the street had been caused by the frantic behavior of a man with a rifle. He had fired is between a crowd of women and children. It turned out, though, to have been, without a ball, and the guy was suffered to continue him like a madman or a drunk. When he went, D-came from the window, where I had followed him immediately after fixing the object in sight. Shortly after I greeted him. The crowd claim was a man in my own pay. "But what purpose you had," did I ask, replacing the letter of a fac-similar? It wouldn't have been better, at the first visit, to have taken openly, and if he left? "D - "Dupin replied, "is a desperate man, and a man of nerves. The hotel of him, too, is not devoid of assistants dedicated to the interests of him. If you had the wild attempt you suggest, I would never leave the live ministerial presence. The good people in Paris may have heard of me no more. But I had an object apart from these considerations. You know my policy prevention. In this matter, I behave like a partisan of the lady in question. For eighteen months the minister had her in power of her. Now he has him in her; Since, being aware that the letter is not in possession of him, he will proceed with him as if he were. So he inevitably engage, at once, to the political destruction of him. The fall of him, also, will no longer be precipitated than embarrassing. It's all very well to talk about the Facilis Descensus having; But in all kinds of climbing, as Catalans of the song said, it is much easier to get to go down. In the present case I have no sympathy - at least no pity - for the one who descends. He is the Horrendum Monstrum, a man without principles of genius. I confess, however, that I would love to know the precise character of the thoughts of him, when, being challenged by whom the terms prefect a certain character, he is reduced to open the letter that I left for him in paper-rack. -- "Like? You have Any particular thing in it? -- "Because it - it didn't seem completely right to leave the inner void --th would have been offensive. D., - in Vienna once, he made me a bad turn that I told him, very goodly, that I have to remember. So, as I knew he would have heard some curiosity regarding the identity of the person who had passed him, I thought it was a sin not to give him a clue. He knows my lady well, and I just copied the words in the middle of the white sheet. They are found in Crebillon's Area ". -- "Atree. "
