Enterprise Toolkit Console Help Forum Acrobat DC Virtualization This document is designed for Enterprise IT professionals who have already set up the installer and are ready to deploy the product in a virtual environment. Organizations must have a valid Acrobat software license for each user who has access to Acrobat on a server. For more information, please refer to the software license terms. Supported activation methods Serialized product? Appointed user? Notes Citrix XenApp supports support with activation count is increased by one for each server. Administrators can control user access by specifying groups. The named user implementation is only supported on Citrix XenApp and XENDESKTOP 7.6 and above. Windows Terminal Server supported Microsoft App-V supported Activation count is equal to the number of clients to which a package is published. Administrators can pre-serialize the package or allow users to be activated with an ID. Please note that APP-V is not tested in Citrix environments. VMware Horizon supported with the named user's implementation name is only supported in VMware Horizon 6.2 and above. Please note the following: Acrobat products take advantage of the features of Windows user profiles to provide end users with a customized experience with regard to configuration and files. Follow VMware's standard methodologies to allocate user resources to one or more servers: Logging: Logging preferences to control the behavior of the UI and the application. Follow VMware's recommendations when planning Registry configuration and implementation. Files: the application creates and writes to files automatically, but end users can also store information, such as of signature, contacts, templates, etc. Follow the VMware recommendations to configure the E/S file. Separate installers: When Enterprise workflows require components that use separate installers, execute those installers at the time of implementation. End users without administrator privileges on the server can not install components if their suddenly requires them. For example, you may need installers of source packages or spelling packages. Push notifications to specific users are not supported. If users log into both a virtual environment and a physical machine, then they may be randomly closed from a physical machine. This is because users can activate Acrobat on several virtual machines, while only two activations per user are allowed. The current implementation provides an over-activation workflow for these environments that does not force users to view or interact with any dialog. Volume licenses are removed when multiple users launch the product simultaneously before activating it. In the Help menu, users who are logged in are not shown as being logged in later sessions. Users can appear as logins in the Help menu, even if they have logged out from the Creative Cloud Desktop app or closed the current session. Logging in with ID without subscriptions may result in random failures. Why do I see an error that my license is expired or not activated? Users should start Acrobat before using "Print to PDF", the Microsoft Office Acrobat plugin and other PDF Maker features. © Copyright 2011, Adobe Inc. Last updated: August 24, 2021.
