6. Flow Tube COIL Resistance Test

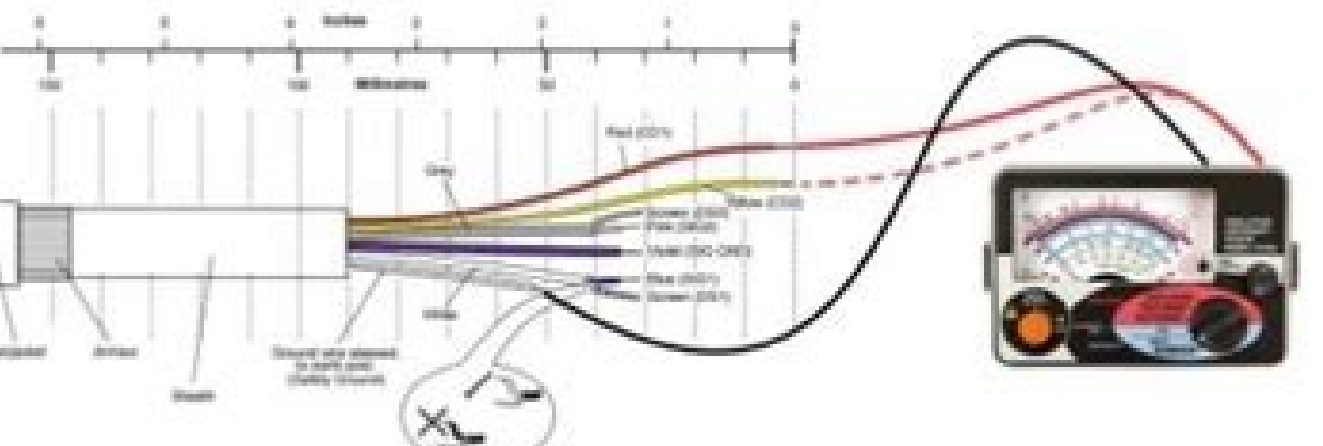

Before testing, remove the sensor wires from the terminals. Using a digital multimeter, test the flow tubes coil resistance. Turn your multimeter to the OHM's setting and test between sensor wire "CD1" & "CD2", seen below;

This result should be between 5 - 100Ω. Any value above or below this range is a FAIL. A fail indicates that the coil is open or short circuit. This will mean replacing the flow tube.

7. Flow Tube COIL Insulation Resistance Test

Using an insulation resistance tester (IR), test the coils resistance to earth. Turn your IR tester to the 500V setting and place your earth (black) probe on the drain (ground). Then with the red probe test "CD1" and "CD2", seen below;

The results should be between 5 - 200MΩ. Anything below this is a FAIL. A fail indicates that the coil is shorted circuited to earth. This will mean replacing the flow tube.
