Running head: APA FORMATTED TITLE PAGE EXAMPLE

1

You should have a running head and page number on every page of your paper. Only write "Running head" on the title page. The running head is an abbreviated version of your paper's title (or the whole title) that should not be longer than 50 characters, counting letters, punctuation, and spaces between words. It should be in all caps.

What is APA style?

Like all documentation styles, APA style provides a standard system which gives credit to others for their contribution to your work. It is known as a "parenthetical" documentation style, meaning that citations to original sources appear in your text. This allows the reader to see immediately where your information was found, and it saves you the trouble of making footnotes or endnotes.

- The APA style includes three kinds of information in in-text citations.
 - The author's last name*
 - The work's date of publication*
 - The page number, appears only in a citation to a direct quotation. (*these items must match exactly the corresponding entry)
- The APA encompasses strict guidelines for the formatting of documents. Formatting the reference list and headings are the most important aspects of these guidelines in academic writing. The general intent of the Publication Manual is to assist the editorial staff of APA journals in typesetting. If you are preparing a paper for a class assignment rather than a journal, you are in a sense publishing it yourself. Therefore, according to APA, you may relax the APA's rules in some cases: The student should find out whether (or in what respects) the university's or department's (or instructor's) requirements for theses, dissertations, and student papers take precedence over those of the Publication Manual.
- Writers are reminded that they are preparing the "final" copy, because the manuscript will not be set in type, the manuscript must be as readable as possible. Many of APA's format requirements aid production for publication. Reasonable exceptions to APA style for theses and dissertations often make sense and are encouraged to better serve communication and improve the appearance of the final document. For example, tables may be more readable if single-spaced, and justified margins may substitute for ragged right margins (in this case, end-of-line hyphens are acceptable).

The upper heading should be created using the Headers & Footers function in Word, be 1/2" from the top of the page, and show up on every page of the paper. The content of the upper header should contain a shortened version of your paper's title in all caps, left justified and the page number right justified. NOTE: The phrase, "Running head," should only be placed on the title page. The remaining pages will only include the shortened title in all caps and the page number.

As a general note, most title pages will contain the above information centered and double spaced. Some professors may request additional content, but the formatting should be the same. Additionally, professors may require a statement at the bottom of the title page limiting liability for both you and the university, particularly where the students are undertaking a business plan development effort.

Method. Describes how the study was conducted. For example, it is better to write a replication of Milgram's (1963) study than a replication of Milgram (1963). Second, when there are two authors the names are not separated by commas, but when there are three or more authors they are. For an edited book, the names of the editors appear with their first and middle initials followed by their last names (not the other way around) with the abbreviation "eds." (or "ed." if there is only one) appearing in parentheses immediately after the final editor's name. J. Only the first word of the article title is capitalized. For example, the term "Asexual orientation" should be used instead of "Asexual preference" because people do not generally experience their orientation as a preference. nor is it as easily changeable as this term suggests (APA Committee on Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Concerns Joint Task Force on Guidelines for Psychotherapy With Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Clients, 2000). Practice: Find a description of a research study in a popular magazine, newspaper, blog, or website. The reference includes a hanging indent. Littenfeld, S. The references themselves are then listed alphabetically according to the last names of the first named author for each citation. A book produced by the APA containing standards for preparing manuscripts to be submitted for publication in order to facilitate scientific communication by promoting clarity of expression and standardizing the organization and content of articles and book chapters. This includes terms that identify people with a disorder or other problem they happen to have. doi:xx.xxxxxxxx Here is a concrete example: Adair, J. References At the end of an APA-style article or book chapter is a list that contains all the works in the text (and only the works cited in the text). O. The opposite side of your dark side. The use of from then use to mean why. You can generally find it in the article record on an electronic database (e.g., PsycINFO) and is usually displayed on the first page of the article published. O. & Lynn, S. References. List the references cited throughout the article. Referring to an article, the sections that are included and in which order appear. Note that references for books and book chapters are similar to those for newspaper articles, but there are also different differences. In S. Caution, however, because the "common knowledge" about human behavior is often wrong. First, the authors' names are grammatically treated as names of people, not as things. Notice different things. Thus formal writing avoids slang, contractions, pop culture references, humor and other elements that would be acceptable in speaking with a friend or informally in writing. You wouldn't write a literary analysis for an English class, although based on psychoanalytic concepts, in APA style. Therefore, when in doubt, find an appropriate reference to quote or remove the questionable claim. Researchers tend to "close" their conclusions, for example, "The results suggest that...". Scientific knowledge is tentative and always subject to review based on new empirical results. It was later expanded and published as an association book and is now in its seventh edition (see the APA Style website online.) Using commas inability to use a comma before and or in a series of three or more elements 8. Empirical research reports are organized with specific sections in fixed. Abstract. Summarizes the research. You would write it in the APA style. An an point, which is not illustrated in these examples but is illustrated in the sample paper in Section 11.2 Writing a Research Report in American Psychological Association (APA) Style. is that the year only needs to be included the first time a particular work is cited in the same paragraph. The third most common error in APA 11.2 has to do with the use of "et al." This is an abbreviation for the Latin term "et alia," which means "and others." In APA style, if an article or a book chapter has more than two authors, you should include all their names when you first cite that work. Lynn, & J. Recent evidence suggests that men and women are similarly talkative (Mehl, Vazire, Ramirez-Esparza, Slater, & Pennebaker, 2007). It adopts a tone that is appropriate for communicating with professional colleagues and practitioners who share an interest in the topic. Editor, B. APA style feature Scientific value or assumption There are very few direct quotations of other researchers. Instead. In general, however, the first approach works well when you want to emphasize the person who conducted the research. For example, if you were comparing the theories of two prominent researchers, (2003). Books For a book, the generic format and a concrete example are as follows: Author, A. One thing to notice about such parenthetical citations is they are often placed at the end of the sentence, which minimizes their disruption to the flow of that sentence. Discussion. Summarizes the study and discusses its implications. Beyond this shared interest, however, these colleagues are not necessarily similar to the writer or to each other. New York, NY: Hudson Street Press. It is not synonymous with "good writing" in general. P. There are two important themes here. The general principles for avoiding biased language are fairly simple. Spacing Not consistently double-spacing between lines 10. Practice: Find and correct the errors in the following fictional APA-style references and citations. This is not only to avoid offending people who would want to offend people who are interested in your work? But also for the sake of scientific objectivity and accuracy. Introduction. Describes previous research and the rationale for the current study. Williams & P. In the journal title, however, all the important words are capitalized. These errors were committed by professional researchers but are probably similar to those that students commit.

is also too long. Part of being a good writer in general is adopting a style that is appropriate to the writing task at hand, and for writing about psychological research, this is usually the APA style. The last names of the authors appear, and the names are separated by an ampersand (&) between the last two. In M. C. It is easier to write about research when you know what information to present, the order in which to present it, and even the style in which to present it. Here are some examples: People can be surprisingly obedient to authority figures (Burger, 2008; Milgram, 1963). (2007) found that women and men spoke about the same number of words per day on average. Reference Citations When you refer to another researcher'sÁÁs idea, you must include a Á (in the text) to the work in which that idea originally appeared and a full reference to that work in the reference list. (2014). Failing to use it after a reference is cited for the first time 4. Scientific research is a large-scale collaboration among many researchers. Identify multiple sources of information about APA style. Most articles and book chapters contain a mixture of the two. Here are some examples: Burger (2008) conducted a replication of MilgraméÁÁÁs (1963) original obedience study. Location: Publisher. Fourth, the year follows immediately after the final authoréÁÁÁs name. Thus APA-style writing mimizes literary devices such as metaphor, imagery, irony, suspense, and so on. Of course, you should consult theÁ Publication ManualÁ or Online APA Style Resources for details on how to format them. Technical terms must be used, but they are used to improve communication, not simply to make the writing sound more eÁÁÁscientific.eÁÁÁ For example, if participants immersed their hands in a bucket of ice water, it is better just to write this than to write that they eÁÁÁwere subjected to a pain-inducement apparatus.eÁÁÁ At the same time, however, there is no better way to communicate that a between-subjects design was used than to use the term eÁÁÁbetween-subjects design.eÁÁÁ APA Style and the Values of Psychology Robert Madigan and his colleagues have argued that APA style has a purpose that often goes unrecognized (Madigan, Johnson, & Linton, 1995). The source of information used in a research article. is the kind of writing that psychologists use to communicate their research with other researchers and professionals. For a chapter in a modified book, the page numbers of the chapter appear in parentheses after the book title with the abbreviation "pp". Finally, both formats end with the posting position and publisher, separated by a colon. Ethics in investigation research. And you wouldn't write a newspaper article, even if it was a new breakthrough in behavioral neuroscience, in APA style. There are no strict rules to decide which of the two quote styles to use. Then identify five specific differences between how this description is written and how it would be written in APA style. The names of the authors appear in the same order of the article, reflecting the relative contributions of the authors to the research. Publisher (Eds.). Third APA style level which includes all specific guidelines for spelling, grammar, references and reference quotes, numbers and statistics, figures and tables and so on. One is that writing in APA style is formal rather than informal. Also note that when there are more quotes in the same series of brackets, they are organized in alphabetical order of the first author and separated from points and commas. APA style levels because the APA style consists of a large number and a variety of guidelines - The publication manual is almost 300 pages long - it can be useful to think about it in terms of three basic levels. Similarly, it is easier to read about research when it is presented in familiar and planned ways. Walters, F. It also works well when describing in detail a particular study. There is the organization of a research article, the high-level style that includes writing in a formal and direct way and the low-level style that consists of many specific rules of grammar, spelling, formatting references and so on. What counts as an idea that must be cited? The second theme of the high-level APA style is that it is simple. B., and author, C. There are specific rules for formatting references and to quote them in the text of an article. Siliana that falls to syllable composite adjectives preceding a noun (for example, "the tulle play technique" should be "Role Playing Technique") 3.
