Visual Illusions (Metamorphopsias)

- These may present as distortions of form, size, movement, or color like deformation of the image, change in size, illusion of movement, or a combination of all three.
  - Illusions of these types have been reported with lesions confined to the occipital lobes but are more frequently caused by shared occipitoparietal or occipitotemporal lesions;
  - The right hemisphere appears to be involved more often than the left.

Open-access publisher of peer-reviewed scientific articles across the entire spectrum of academia. Research network for academics to stay up-to-date with the latest scientific publications, events, blogs and news. Lateral medullary syndrome is a neurological disorder causing a range of symptoms due to ischemia in the lateral part of the medulla oblongata in the brainstem. The ischemia is a result of a blockage most commonly in the vertebral artery or the posterior inferior cerebellar artery. Lateral medullary syndrome is also called Wallenberg's syndrome, posterior inferior cerebellar artery ... Parinaud's syndrome is an inability to move the eyes up and down. It is caused by compression of the vertical gaze center at the rostral interstitial nucleus of medial longitudinal fasciculus (riMLF). The eyes lose the ability to move upward and down. It is a group of abnormalities of eye movement and pupil dysfunction. It is caused by lesions of the upper brain stem and is named ... People with Gerstmann's syndrome often struggle with writing, arithmetic, language, and the ability to perceive objects, though the degree and extent of damage varies from person to person and injury to injury. Damage that crosses both parietal lobes leads to a condition called Balint's syndrome, which UNSW Arts, Design & Architecture brings together complementary disciplines, skills and expertise to solve problems that involve life ...
