The printable names in the bubble letters are great for beginners or if you are making other handicrafts with their name. I usually recommend starting early with the name writing because it is something that most children will find useful even from a young age. My best advice is to allow the child to lead in his learning. It would be impossible to create localization name spreadsheets for each name and every name as we do with other early words. Or to use names? With the name writing practice children will be able to label their own artwork, sign their name on cards (Valentine's Day is a great opportunity to practice the writing of names!), and help with the general recognition of words. We are trying to make the educational tools easier to use on the Internet and our user opinion is key to this process. They will still develop important pre-writing skills such as muscle strength, pencil grip and card formation while also getting to write something that is related to their life. To start, choose your sources below and type a title and instructions.
